President's Corner

Letter from Marc A. Passman, M.D.

Greetings Colleagues,

Now entering its 36th year, the Peripheral Vascular Surgical Society (PVSS) has evolved into the premier society for young vascular surgeons.

While other vascular societies have a broad based membership of vascular specialists in different phases of their career, PVSS is the only vascular society dedicated to young vascular surgeons in the early stages (first 15 years) of their career.

The society is open to all young vascular surgeons interested in a forum for basic, clinical and translational research, an environment to share ideas, opportunity to participate in peer review, participation in society administrative function, and engaging in a collegial atmosphere that fosters development of life-long professional and social relationships.

To promote more active participation among our young members, PVSS has undergone an administrative restructuring over the past few years to allow interested members to become more involved in PVSS committee work and leadership opportunities.

Through our biannual meetings, PVSS will continue to have the highest level of scholarship while giving our members and attendees the chance to submit, present, discuss and promote the field of vascular and endovascular surgery as outlined in our mission statement.

The PVSS welcomes all vascular surgical specialists, young and old, and this year there are more opportunities than ever before to participate, contribute, and learn. On behalf of the officers, committee members, and members of the society, we look forward to seeing you all in Steamboat and Chicago!

Sincerely,

Marc A. Passman, M.D.
President, PVSS
